Committee Named to Look After Upper Valley Work; Tree Planting Favored.

Discussion of plans for the building portion of the time of the meeting of portion of the time of the meeting of the county commissioners. Tuesday morning. Favorable reports were re-ceived from the island. Yslata and the upper valley, where roadways are now under construction. According to the reports from the island, the county has been handling the earth on the roads at between seven and eight cents per yard. The commissioners' court author-ized the drawing up of contracts offer-ing those who had teams and necessary tools for road work, the opportunity to work on the roads for the same price that it is costing the county.

that it is costing the county.

Judge Adrian Pool, Carl Longuemare and A. Courchesine were appointed as a committee to look after the road building in the upper valley. Seth Orndorff. of Belen. Tex. was appointed road deputy of the Hueco tanks road.

Asks Lighting Franchise.

The interurban wants to light up the vailey. Tuesday morning the Bio Grande Valley Traction company asked the commissioners for a 50-year franchise entitling it to instal poles and furnish the citizens of the valley with electric lights. On account of the absence of commissioner like Loewenstein, carried it out.

the matter of granting the franchise was passed.

Unless Clint, Tex. comes forward and donates a lot to the county, the chances are the citizens there will lose the jail cell that the county presented to them last year. Judge Eylar stated that after the cell was given. Clint wanted the county to buy a lot there. Fabens may get the cell, as the citizens there are willing to give a lot to the county, and in addition build a house around the cell. Clint will be given an opportunity to donate the lot, before the final disposition of the cell is made.

On application of county treasurer I. D. Ponder, the commissioners court authorized the treasurer to pay the sum of $18.53%, said to be interest due on outstanding county bonds. The treasurer was also authorized to take up what county bonds he could when he received the money from the county tax collector.

say against him, He thought that mistakes had been made in the street paying. He cited the incident of his friend running his automobile on Montana street past the mayor's house. With every chug of the engine, Mr Putnam said the man would utter. 'Good, old Kelly.' The friend reached Magoffin avenue, struck some rough parts, it was then, he said, 'confound old Kelly.' When he got on Rio Grande street, declared Mr. Putnam, "what he said would not do to repeat here."

Mr. Putnam advocated a new city fall, a modern prizon be said in Keeping with modern practices of civilisation. He advocated a Riberal policy relative to the city schools, whereby the best teachers could be employed and an opportunity afforded every boy and girt to get an education. The law provides that a board of trustees shall run the schools, and the mayor and the aldermen provide the money.' Ovation for J. A. Dick.

An ovation greeted the introduction of Mr. Dick. Without saying anything against anyone, Mr. Dick said that he thought the time had come when there should be a change in the city administration. "It has never been my policy," he declared, "to say anything against my competitor. My instructions to my salesmen always are do not say anything against your competitor, but use their energies in boosting their own grods I am not a public speaker, it is not in my line. I did not see, this position. Yet I do not believe a man is a good citizen until he has served the people in some way. I tried to get another man to make this race, and whether the sacrifice i made by running for it was foothardy or courage-cus, that is up to you."

Would Enforce the Laws.

Would Enforce the Laws.

Mr. Dick stated that he believed in the enforcement of the law, as he thought every good citizen must, and that if the ticker was elected, none would be disappointed along those lines. One who did not enforce the law, he decisted, was a violator of it. Mr. Dick said it was surprising to find how few persons there were who respected the law. This, he said, he discovered when he was foreman of the grand jury. It was not the policy of the ticket, he said, to work hardship on anyone, but to give all a square deal, and that he thought no one could object to that.

Davis Makes First Speech.

Davis Makes First Speech.

M. B. Davis, candidate for alderman, stated that he had lived here it years and no one had ever heard him make a speech. He said he was a man in husiness and had no time to make speeches. He urged every man to get every legal voter to the polls on election day and let him exercise his American privilege of casting a vote. If the ticket was to be elected, Mr. Davis said, it would require the untiring efforts of all. "Get them out to vote for us," he said. "Get them out to vote for some one, but get them out."

Tombstone, Ariz., March 25.—By a ruling by the supreme court, the term of court which was to have started this week has been abandoned, as it was found that nearly every prisoner to be tried would have to be given another reliminary hearing and new informations filed against each one by the county attorney. Just how this ruling are now in the penitentiary is another problem. The hoard of supervisors reget them out." Border the Orntor of the Meeting. Raiph Border, candidate for corporation court judge, was the orator of the tion court judge, was the orator of the evening. It was he who took issue with the argument that the ring is briging against the Citizens' ticket that a fight is being made by Democrats against the nominees of that party. It take issue with that argument, declared Mr. Berder, There was no opposition in the primaries, You might term those a farce from start to finish. There is no legal or moral law that would make a man feel like he had to support those accalled nominees. I, for you have my country above my party.

support those accalled nominees. I, for one, place my country above my party, my city above the ring. This is not a national campaign. There isn't ide question of the tariff, or ship subsidies involved. The primaries were got up and controlled by ring men. Democracy means representation. The ring is opposed to that. The ring has stood, and always will stand, for government of the ring, for the ring and by the ring. Is that Democracy? In the coming election on April 8, the ring members will find that the voters of El Paso will judge them for what they are, and not what they call themselves.

Not an Easy Fight.

Not an Easy Fight. "What we want," he declared, "is representation. We have met here to inaugurate a movement to take the reins away from a few and put them in the hands of the people where they belong. This is not an easy fight ahead of us. It is not easy to fight a ring. It has the city and the county employees to of us. It is not easy to fight a ring. It has the city and the county employes to start with, and the support of all the petty violators of the law, and those to whom special privileges along these lines have been granted. These privileges have been extended for the purpose of getting the support of that class of people. What we want to do is to arouse in the breast of all a feeling of public responsibility that will result in showing them that we need and are entitled to all support. If we are successful in getting the good people of El Pase to the polis, we cannot go down in defeat."

Government by the Bosses.

Government by the Bosses.

C. L. Vowell stated that he had never approved of political bosses or Kellyism. "I am not only opposed to the manner they have of selecting their candidates," he said, "but to their election of them. No one has the right to select the candidates, even though he style binself a Young Democrat." It was a question, Mr. Vowell said, of the citizens determining for themselves as to whether or not they wanted a clean, honest administration, or to be further governed by bosses, "If they are not grafters," he added.
